FRANKFORT, MICHIGAN.

SKETCH OF TOWN AND COUNTY.

A Delightful Summer Resort Business Interests and Representative Business Men.

A member of the editorial staff of Tax Tennoans visited Frankfort recently to attend the session of the State Horticultural Society which met there, and of which a report hus, heretofore, been published. The sessions of the society were both interesting and profitable to those engaged in borticulture, and the discussions showed that the fruit-growers of Benzie County were well up to the times in the practical as well as the theoretical features of horticulture, and the fruits and flowers exhibited, and the farms visited demonstrated the fact that this reday to take a foremost rank in many of the ducts of the soil for which Michigan has some so famous. After listening to the bug-killers until he could almost feel the bugs crawling up his spinal column, and was filled with dread, lest the worms, and potato bugs, carculto, aphales, codling moth and other vermin too numerous to mention were about to swallow up all creation, the reporter decided to take a look at Frankfort and the surrounding country and see what was left. He found a delightful town of several hundred inhabitants, a genial wide-awake class of people, and some of the finest scen-ery to be found in Michigan.

THE TOWN. Frankfort is located in Benzie County, on the shore of Lake Michigan, at the point where the Aux Bex Scies river empties into the lake. It is about thirty-six miles north of Manistee and forty miles from Traverse of Manistee and forty miles from Traverse City, with both of which places it is connected by boat and stage lines. It is a thriving and busy town and a very pleasant place for residence, especially during the summer season. It has four saw-mills, a shingle-mill, a flour and feed mill, an extensive iron farnace, now idle, and several other manufactories which employ a good many men and do a prosperous business, three hotels, two newspapers, good churches and schools and good stores, and many fine residences. The scenery about the town is very romantic and full of variety. The view of Lake Michigan from the bluffs north of the town is very fine, and affords an outlook over the lake of many miles, while the breezes are always fresh and invigorating.

A SUMMER RESORT. As a summer resort for those who want to forget the cares of business for a few weeks and enjoy themselves in quiet living and in hunting and fishing, there is certainly no more delightful spot in Michigan than the vicinity of Frankfort. Benzie county has about thirty-three lakes within her borders, besides two fine rivers and unmerous brooks and creeks well stocked with trout and grayling. Crystal Lake, which is only a short drive from the town, is several miles in extent and is one of the finest lakes in the State. Capt. Reed, of the Forest Avenue House, with other citizens has erected a nice boat house on its shores and a trip to this lake is one of the features As a summer resort for those who want to and a trip to this lake is one of the features of a trip to Frankfort. The Captain not only keeps an excellent hotel, but he takes special pains to see that pleasure seekers have full opportunity for enjoyment. He is now making an addition of twenty rooms to the Forest Avenue House, making fifty rooms in all for the accommodation of ruests, and they are well furnished and well kept, while his table is of the best. For the use of visitors he keeps a full supply of fish-ing tackle of all kinds, and furnishes visitors with livery, boats, guides and all conveniences necessary for thorough enjoyment of sport. The Park House, under the proprietorship of Wm. H. Chambers, also has good accommodations and affords a fine view of the lake. It is a good place to

Among the points interesting to visitors is the burial place of Father Pierre Marquette, who died in 1675 and his remains rest on the shore of Lake Michigan within the village incorporation. From Point Aux Bex Scies the Manitou islands are in plain view, while the "Mormons Retreat, in 1855" is also pointed out.

Cenzie county is one of the best for agriculture and horticulture in Northern Michigan. The soil is a light sandy loam and the surface is gently rolling. The timber is mostly hardwood and the forcests are very fine. Peaches, apples, pears, plums, grapes, cherries and berries of all kinds are grown with gratifying success, besides the usual farm crops raised in Northern Michigan.

JUGGLERY. The Art So Thoroughly Exposed the Peo-ple flave Lost All Interest in It.

[N. Y. Mall and Express.]

"The art of jugglery has not advanced much within the past twenty-five years," painfully admitted a superannuated wizard to a reporter. "Indeed, it has nearly all been thoroughly exposed, and the very minute methods by which wonderful re-sults are attained appear now as easy as making a coin disappear from the closed fist. So much for science and civiliza-

"What will be the result, do you think?" "Some of the results are pulpable now. The old sleight-of-hand man has nimost passed away. The wonderful cabinet of spirits, which at one time astonished the world, it has been proven, was nothing more nor less than a trick in which confederates participated. Heller, Houdin, and the Davenport brothers were all exposed. What is left for the professionals to do is the question. They can not all turn sword-swallowers, or knife-throwers, because that requires a lifetime of practice. Some new departure will have to be taken in which the cabinet does not appear, and the tricks of Houdin and Heller are omitted. This is essentially the age of realism, and therefore the tricks in jugglery will have to far exceed in cleverness any that we have ever seen produced. When a wizard has a stage of his own he can produce startling effects which defy superficial investigation. But the time has arrived when superficial investigation is never carried on, but instead such a searching and profound one is performed that the little apparatuses designed to assist are taken into consideration and removed. The game is effectually blocked. Heller, with his wonderful memory, could do many strange tricks, and Houdin was considered wonderful by the learned, and supernatural by the ignorant. All they both did is perfectly plain. Some new method, in my opinion, assisted by science and electricity, will in a few years, be discovered to delude and create speculation as the cabinet and many other tricks did for years. The horse-play jugglery of the present doesn's amount to much. The Japanese do 25. tonishing tricks, but there is nothing mysterious about them, since their tricks depend altogether on their personal agility and years of constant practice. All of the tricks and jugglery of the present day must give way. It no longer entertains. The people want something they can see into, so they will not go any more to witness cabinet trick performances. Who will open up the new field remains to be seen. But that the times are ripe for it no one can doubt, and who the wizard will be to cheat the eyes and physical investiga-

[Pittsburgh Post.] It may be only a Barlow knife with a rusty blade and a broken point, or it may be a peg top haif split down the middle, or only half a dozen battered spools on a knotted string. But there it lies, whatever it is, stowed carefully away in the far-off corner of the bureau drawer, under a yellow pile of little linen and stockings, patched and darned at beel and at knee. But all the gems of Golconda can not buy them; no, nor the gold of all the wide world size their preciousness. For they are the holy of the holies. It is not often that she goes to that drawer, not often she looks upon the treasures there. But once in a while, sometimes, the time when a knock comes to the heart, that comes to mothers' hearts alone, like the famished and thirsty, she goes to the nest of her jewels. Slowly, with soft hands, the little linens are laid aside, and slowly, with trembling hands, the knife, the top, or the string of dingy spools are drawn forth. Ab, how gently they are pressed to the hearts and lips! What words are they saying, what sad, sweet songs are they singing? Kissed and cried on, and cried on and kissed. Then yearningly, reluctantly clinging, back they got to their nest in the far-off corner, and the yellowing little linens are put back one by one. All alone, jealous that mortal eyes should see her worship at the shrine, the drawer is closed, and she who knelt before it comes to earth
